“Welcome to the first edition of our magazine. It’s filled with action-packed and intriguing articles. Hope you enjoy!”

This is the In Range Magazine. Every issue has at least 3 original, commissioned feature articles on a variety of subjects of interest to curious people. We aim to publish an article every other half term.

We write about hard news, celebrities, music, sports, entertainment as well as style and fashion. Our articles have a connection with each other that links each story, whether it be the technological world, or the spirit of an individual’s point of view. For instance, when we run an article on hard news, we peel away the mystery that is invisible and we provide useful information for everyone.

The magazine combines the experience of reality, with the experiences of individuals. The writers of the articles base the issues on true facts and their own personal experiences they may have come across.

The magazine aims to raise awareness of the important issues that are raised in today’s society, its main objective is to spread knowledge to everyone and give them the experience of reality.

THE 45TH PRESIDENT OF THE USA IS...

REPORTER: Anisah Tanveer

ON NOVEMBER 8TH, 128 MILLION PEOPLE TOOK TO THE POLLS TO VOTE FOR THEIR NEXT PRESIDENT.

The top two candidates for the election were no other than Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump. The election is known for being the most money spent in any election so far racking up a sum of £1.6 billion and resulted in Donald Trump winning. Many were left shocked including A-List celebrities such as Michelle and Barack Obama themselves.

In the early hours of Wednesday morning (the 9th of November) it was found out that Donald Trump had the majority of the votes in certain states leaving him as the President-elect. As we know Trump himself has had many professions but he is mostly known as a businessman, none of his previous jobs have been related to anything like being President. Some people didn't vote for him because of the bad press that he'd had during the campaign whilst others admired the fact that he was outspoken and told the public the truth about their country.

Some people viewed Hilary Clinton as the stronger one between the two as she has had experience in the White House and more of an idea about being a politician including the pressure that you would have to face. But Americans may have decided not to vote for Clinton because of the problem she faced with the FBI regarding her email, as it is believed that she sent classified information over her personal email. Hence the public felt that if she was President of America then how could she deal with the classified information to do with the country? Could they trust her?

On January 20th 2017 Barack Obama will officially hand over the role and title of President of the United States of America to Donald Trump. Trump has decided to invest his time into Obama's unfinished projects for America like ObamaCare. However, many people have had mixed emotions about the newly revealed President-elect.

CELEBRITIES REACT TO THE NEW U.S. PRESIDENT

REPORTER: Znairah Anwar

Recently Donald Trump has been elected as the US president. Many cry that the system was rigged, or that he had won over the heart of the US which was apparently 'long overdue'. Now we already know how our fellow peers, teachers and what our families think of him. 'Just racist, a sick person and no one like him', says a fellow civilian in Manchester or more immature comments such as, 'He deserves to die'. But what we haven't been told is how our celebrities have been reacting to this unfortunate happening.

BBC News state that singer Cher said, "The world will never be the same". While pop star Ariana Grande said she was 'in tears'. Not only have they making their voices heard by freedom of speech, these poor souls have taken it upon themselves to approach social media as a way to reign the world back into one of serenity. Katy Perry sent out a heart-warming message on twitter, encouraging everyone to keep on moving, saying, "Do not sit still. Do not weep. MOVE. We are not a nation that will let HATE lead us". Clearly this is in attempt to spark rebellion against infamous Trump and his new leadership. Many however, embraced this change with open arms such as Piers Morgan, he supported Trump through social media, he quoted something that Trump had said to him, in his tweet, 'Trump's last words to me when I saw him in New York in May: 'Well Piers, see you at the White House...'' So there is clearly a strong controversy and contrast in opinions between the A to Z list of celebrities.

Personally my opinion is that America picked a person that strongly believes that Obama's way of presidency was inefficient. From what I've seen Obama was unbiased when it came to religion, he welcomed all cultures with open arms whereas on the other hand, Trump refuses any of that. Yes, there is freedom of speech but such freedom has its own limits. And rights that are owned to every American person out there. What about them? They were raised in the streets and cities of America, they do their jobs for America and somehow Trump becomes president along the way.

This will be a day marked in history, people will look back in the history books when they're centuries ahead and notice the change in population in certain areas and notice the lack of people in America.

SAMSUNG HIT BY DOUBLE WHAMMY

REPORTER: Safa Illyas

Samsung stopped their production of Samsung Galaxy Note 7s due to exploding batteries and handsets catching fire. 2.5 million Note 7's were recalled and given back having said that they were functioning correctly and completely safe. After this was said, there were still many reports of brand new recalled Note 7's still catching fire.

Samsung producers have said, "Because consumer safety remains our top priority, Samsung will ask all carriers and retail partners globally to stop sales and exchanges of the Galaxy Note 7 while the investigation is taking place." They also added "Consumers with either an original Galaxy Note 7 or a replacement Galaxy Note 7 device should be powered down and stop using the device and take advantage of the remedies available."

On Monday evening a spokeswoman insisted that the phones were now safe to use, and they would cause no harm, but on Tuesday, Samsung producers said that they would now stop the production line of the Galaxy Note 7. "We recently re-adjusted the production volume for thorough investigation and quality control, but putting consumer safety as our top priority, we have reached a final decision to halt the production of the Galaxy Note 7's," they said.

Recently, an owner of the Samsung Galaxy J5 claims that the phone caught fire and the back flew off. She said that she asked her 4 year old child to take it off the charger and give it to her. She noticed that it was burning hot and smoke was seeping out of it. She then threw down the phone, and stepped back.

After this event took place, she said that she will sue the company of Samsung. Samsung have taken no actions to resolve the Samsung Galaxy J5 catching fire, but they have taken the Samsung Galaxy Note 7 off sale and stopped the production line. There has also been an increase in the sale of the iPhone 6 and the recently launched iPhone 7. People are responding by being more cautious with Samsung products.

Zainab Islam: 'I do not think that Samsung is dealing with the problem correctly. They are not establishing the problem which means that this can happen again on a much larger scale.'

Reem Al-assadi: 'I am not happy, that the Samsung Galaxy Note 7 has been catching fire, especially since I was considering this for my new phone. I do like Samsung's products because they have a nice style, they fit the hand size, even though they are hard to understand and once you alter one setting, the others also alter themselves.' She also added, 'I also think that the iPhones will now sell more due to Samsung's products catching fire unexpectedly. If Samsung find a solution to the problem, I will be reconsidering to

"IF SAMSUNG FIND A SOLUTION TO THE PROBLEM, I WILL BE RECONSIDERING TO BUY FUTURE SAMSUNG PRODUCTS."

THE MTV EMA'S 2016

THE 2016 EMA'S WERE HELD IN ROTTERDAM, NETHERLANDS

This year, the line-up of performances included: Bruno Mars, Shawn Mendes, Zara Larsson, Greenday, The Weeknd, Kings of Leon, and various other acts.

REPORTER: Aleena Mahmood

The 2016 MTV EMAs were held in Rotterdam, Netherlands on 6 November. A fantastic music awards show that included multiple musical acts that had performed and been nominated for a wide range of awards and was hosted this year by American singer songwriter Bebe Rexha. This year, the line-up of performances included: Bruno Mars, Shawn Mendes, Zara Larsson, Greenday, The weeknd, Kings of Leon, and various other acts.

This event excited many teenagers nationwide, as the wide range of acts nominated and attending have huge fan bases. Year 9 student Muqaddas Iqbal, had enjoyed watching the awards, like many other teenagers and said that, "I really liked the MTV awards this year, not only because I am a big fan of Shawn Mendes, and he won great awards, but I thought the hosts were engaging and funny. That added to the excitement."

The award show had big wins in particular for Canadian artists, such as Justin Bieber, Drake, and Shawn Mendes; Justin Bieber being one of the major acts was unable to attend the event. Despite not attending the event, he had won the award for the biggest fans. Although, surprisingly Bieber had lost his winning streak as best male to a fellow Canadian artist, who has had a sudden spike in popularity due to his seemingly undeniable talent; Shawn Mendes. This not only surprised the 'Beliebers' but also Shawn himself who was in great shock to receive this award. It caused a great deal of humour due to the fact that several months earlier Bieber had claimed in an interview that he did not know who Shawn was. Justin and Shawn were extremely popular at the awards. Justin won the award for best song with his track 'Sorry' which had topped the charts for numerous weeks earlier on this year, and Shawn also won best worldwide act.

Drake, another Canadian act, won the award for best hip hop, and many of his songs have peaked in the charts throughout the year.

The best female award was won by Lady Gaga, which could be due to her recent comeback with her album "Joanne" and the involvement she had with politics and the recent American election. The Weeknd won best video, following recent hit 'Starboy' which reached very high in the charts and had much success.

Zara Larsson, a Swedish singer songwriter, won the award for the best new act, and has had a high number of hit records this year. A range of other awards were won at the show including: the best UK act - Little Mix, best U.S. act - Ariana Grande, and best Australian act - Troye Sivan.

The MTV awards were a big success not only for MTV itself but the artists it congratulated, earning the attention of millions of people worldwide.

Our first interview features...

TV PRESENTER OLIVIA BIRCHENOUGH

REPORTERS: Zainab Imram and Anum Mahmood

Don't you ever remember just being a kid?

When you didn't have to stress over exams like your life depended on it? When you didn't give a second thought about what snapchat filter would look better on you (the bear or the flower crown, I can never decide)? But let's take ourselves back to when we'd wake up on a Saturday morning and zoom down the stairs, brushing our teeth and changing out of our pyjamas. A long distant thought, and turn our telly screens to Channel 5 where we were always met with the gleeful and cheery faces of Milkshake!

And that's exactly what we got out of Olivia Birchenough when we interviewed her on the 16th of November. She was nothing less than a little Miss Sunshine (just to refer to the show), and answered our questions with a delightful smile. Here's the interview we had with Olivia and then a surprise quick-fire round:

Let's first talk about your career journey and what has happened so far, what would you say has been the best moment of it all?

OB: I first began my studies in the Rose Bruford College of Theatre and Performance, but I'd have to say that Estonia was amazing. I got to go there to study aerial acrobatics and circus skills in the Estonian Academy of Music and Theatre for about four and a half months. It was absolutely freezing, the temperature would go to about -35°C! It seemed to be hot in England when I came back! But it was amazing, I'll never forget it.

How did you get your job of children's TV presenting?

OB: When I came back from Estonia for my third year of studying, I began to think about a career in television, more specifically linked to children. Before, I was completely clueless of what I was going to do and how I'd get people to notice me, so I sent a few letters and requests out to BBC, ITV, Channel 4 and 5. For a few months it was all quiet but then I got a reply back from Channel 5 asking me if I'd like to do a screen test, and I just went for it. So, I guess that's where it all went into lift off and I landed a job with Milkshake, also getting to do their theatre tour as well.

Who would you say is your inspiration?

OB: Oh gosh, that is a hard one. I'll have to go with my family, mainly my mum and dad. It was sort of bizarre for them to hear from me one day, coming back from school, saying that I want to become an actress, my mum being a dental nurse and my dad being a teacher. But it was great, they supported me every step of the way and never held me back from doing what I love.

If you weren't working with Milkshake, what would you be doing right now?

OB: I've always been interested in sport so I suppose a fitness instructor, having a few fitness qualifications under my belt, or perhaps a physiotherapist or something in the field of sports therapy.

What would you say is your favourite show on Milkshake?

OB: I'd have to say Ben and Holly's Little Kingdom. You might think it looks a bit childish, but some of the jokes made in that show can actually make grown adults like us in the studio laugh, although it goes completely over the heads of children.

What piece of advice would you give to girls our age about career choices and the future?

OB: Just go for it and give it your best shot. Whatever you're passionate about, just do what you know you need to. Don't let anyone tell you that you can't do something until you know, after testing yourself again and again, that you can't. I didn't want to get to the age of my career where I look back and go, "Well, I could've done that." Even if I tried and failed, that would've been enough for me, but I didn't. I just always wanted to give it a good go, and that's what I think everyone should do.

After the interview, and a few pictures taken here and there, we said goodbye to Olivia Birchenough and watched as Britain's very own Little Miss Sunshine parted ways with us, soon remembering that we'd see her beaming and joyous smile tomorrow morning. Well, mostly younger children would, but you get what we mean.

We can all obviously take something away from this, and that is that we need to chase our dreams, not just follow them and keep trying at something we know we desperately want. But dreaming isn't all there is too it. Like Olivia, we need to work hard and show the dedication everyone expects you to have. The poor woman wakes up at 4.30am to get to her job, but she knows that the work she's going to do is the one she worked hard for and the one she knows she'll love and never forget for the rest of her life. Let's aspire to be like that one day, in hope of a bright future for all of us.

HARRY POTTER AND THE CURSED CHILD

REVIEWER: Zainab Imran

When you're a huge fan of reading like I am, you always have a gigantic love of different books and book series. My bookshelf speaks for itself; with the enchantment of the Lord of the Rings series, to the mystical lands of Narnia and the wacky and relatable world of the Wimpy kid. But what happens when these magical, wondrous and heart-moving tales end?

Many may want to overflow their favourite authors social media, e-mail inboxes and post-boxes with manic complaints and pleas of continuing these books. It's extremely rare that an author would carry on a series they left and moved on from. There are plenty of times when people will think it will be a complete and utter failure, but no. Not with the book I'm going to review to you today.

Just when we thought the queen had finished her reign with her best-selling, brilliant and beautifully told books had come to a close, J.K Rowling slammed that crown back onto her head and with that, her new manuscript-made-book written with Jack Thorne and John Tiffany; made for the West End stage, but equally loved by us bookworms.

Ladies and gentlemen, I think you know which book I'm talking about. I present to you Harry Potter and the Cursed Child! Set fifteen years after the battle of Hogwarts, in which Harry Potter and co. defeated Lord Voldemort and saved the day once again, we follow the struggles and hardships of both Harry and his son, Albus Severus Potter. As well as having to be the over-worked father with a job at the ministry and having to take care of his family, Harry is struggling to bond with Albus, who must live up to the name of the Potters which he never asked for.

Then, when Albus finds a way to find his way out of the thick fog, he and his best friend Scorpius Malfoy mess the flow of time and bring the past and present together, meaning ominous and dangerous consequences for everyone. Not only do we learn the lesson of not messing and mixing with things we shouldn't be, but we learn what it truly means to find out who we are, as the Potters must find who the Cursed Child truly is.

I still remember the force my hands had on this book and my God, it would've strangled a person's life out of them. I was not putting that book down, it was like my life depended on finishing it. (Fair disclaimer: this book caused me to lose a lot of hours of sleep, but I am a hopeless fangirl... who advises you not to do that!)

Many may say that the script may have caused a bit of confusion and it had been a bit of a let-down. Many may also say that it read more like a juvenile-fanfiction and that characters had turned out to be under-developed, but do you know what I say to that?

To that I say... stuff it!

This book could not have been written any better, in all its magical perfection, and maybe the reason people thought it didn't live up to the Harry Potter legacy was its format. How a text is written makes a huge difference. You can ask anyone about that, and comparing a novel to a script is a bit pointless. One can easily say that novel's allow you to imagine it all, however I believe that this version gave us the opportunity to look through Rowling's eyes and see what she wanted it to be for us, presented through both the play itself and the script. It still held the charm and the true lessons of friendship triumphing over evil.

Perhaps the Deathly Hallows had been the cherry on the top for many Potterheads, but the Cursed Child certainly gave me an extra topping of whipped cream for my appetite.

Overall, I found the plot to be gripping and intense. I was in a constant eagerness to actually turn the page without hyperventilating at its stunning and amazing transition of setting. You get the ambience that time has moved on and now the spotlight has swung over to the next generation of witches and wizards, which is exactly what I think Rowling was aiming for.

After nearly twenty years, seven novels, eight feature films, a theme park and now a West End play along with its manuscript edition, I am still so ecstatic to see that the magic and heart-felt joy I had when I was ten years old first reading the Philosopher's Stone, is still here with us. J.K Rowling, me and my fellow Potterheads salute you!

BOMBER JACKETS

YOUR

REPORTER: Safa Al-Faraj

Welcome to 2016/17, when last year's wardrobe has become completely dated and useless. Just joking. Just because we're shopping for new trends doesn't mean we can't still work the old ones in fresh ways. Sometimes all it takes is a quick little update to pull off the look you loved so much last season!

The bomber jacket, has recently become a trend that many seem to have taken a liking to. Including me, many are in love with the bomber jacket trend! What is there not to love?

It's fashionable, lightweight and fun! It does give a slight effortless sporty edge, in a very un-fashionable fashion to its sartorialist wearers, perfect for all weathers, this jacket is definitely a winter must.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF BOMBERS?

Muminah: They're lightweight and can be kept minimalistic or can be used as the main attraction of the outfit.

Vareesha: I agree, they're fashionable all year round as well, so there's a budget tip!

WHICH DO YOU RECOMMEND?

Vareesha: Like I said before, I enjoy jackets, in this case a bomber jacket, that can be used all year round, and not be restricted to one season.

Muminah; I agree! But, bombers can vary and if you're interested in buying loads of bombers, were not saying not to!

DO YOU ENJOY A SPECIFIC STYLE?

Vareesha: No, I like to widen my ranges and not just spend money buying one bomber in one specific style!

Muminah: I like all bombers, and at different seasons I prefer different styles.

I would like to thank Muminah & Vareesha for agreeing to be interviewed!

Scarlett crowned Queen of the Jungle!

REPORTER: Anya Wilkinson-Leishman

Scarlett Moffatt wins I'm a Celebrity 2016, being the second Geordie lass in a row to win the ongoing Ant and Dec series.

It's a bitter-sweet time of the year for avid fans of the challenge show. I'm a Celebrity has come to an end once again, but the camp has crowned a new QUEEN of the jungle. Gogglebox star Scarlett Moffatt took the crown for the 16th series of the Australia based show being the second Geordie queen in 2 years to be crowned with ex Geordie Shore star Vicky Pattison winning in 2015. Although before her arrival in the camp Scarlett was branded negatively for not being a celebrity and instead being a normal member of the general public. It was clear that Scarlett was a stand out contender to win the show ever since the vote off started. A complete shock to viewers at home and fellow campmates came when Eastenders' Archie Mitchell and Gavin and Stacey star Larry Lamb left the jungle finishing in sixth place, despite being tipped to win earlier on in the series.

Although the show brought in a whole host of new celebrities this year including Diversity dancer Jordan Banjo and Emmerdale actor Adam Thomas, this was not the only shake up the show experienced. The ITV hit show's spin off, formerly known as "I'm A Celebrity Get Me Out Of Here NOW!" presented by Laura Whitmore, Joe Swash and Rob Beckett was rebranded "I'm A Celebrity: Extra Camp." This saw old host Joe Swash joined by former jungle queens Vicky Pattison and Stacey Solomon alongside Chris Ramsay.

Before arriving in the jungle, Carol Vorderman commented: "I am not a scaredy cat, but I am not a great swimmer". She then added: "I will give trials a go. I want to step out of my comfort zone," implying her earlier plans of taking on an adventurous role in the camp.

Taking a look back at the first show of the series, the show saw the celebrities, along with Ant and Dec arrive at a meeting point via speed boats to choose the celebrities that they wished to compete for their right to be excluded from the first bushtucker trial. The first challenge being allocated to the city team who had to walk across a 300m high plank in a bid to save their fellow celebrity from taking the first challenge. Jordan, Ola, Scarlett and Sam took part in a record breaking trial, with a record number of critters being used for the trial as reported by Ant and Dec. During this time period, I took it upon myself to question two of our own Whalley Range High School students on their thoughts on the series so far and who they tipped for the win and it seems as though students of our age group all had similar opinions on the matter.

When asked what she thought of the show so far at this point and who she placed her bets on, year 8 student Bushra Muhammad commented: "My thoughts on I'm A Celebrity Get Me Out Of Here have been very good so far. I didn't know most of the celebrities this year but I am so far hoping that Scarlett wins because I just love her!" I also questioned fellow year 8 student Isobelle and she had this to say: "This year so far I have found it absolutely hilarious but also very cringe worthy. The person I want to win is Scarlett from Gogglebox. She is determined and makes me laugh".

And there we have it, from the evidence collected we can see that Scarlett Moffatt was always a clear favourite amongst the year 8 students!

"THANK YOU AGAIN EVERYONE FOR YOUR SUPPORT, THIS MEANS MORE TO ME THAN ANY WORDS CAN DESCRIBE."

POPPY UPROAR

REPORTER: Zeinab Abdelrazik

WERE FIFA RIGHT TO BAN THEM?

There has been an uproar of opinions over the past weeks regarding England and Scotland wearing poppies in football matches. With many newspapers commenting on the nation's decision. Originally England, Scotland and Wales met deciding that they would wear black armbands with poppies on; to remember those who have given their lives in the war. They were to be worn during the World Cup qualifiers at Wembley with the games taking place on Armistice Day.

Yet after the FIFA turned down the request to wear the symbol, Wales claimed that they will not defy FIFA and instead decided to wear plain, black armbands "to honour the fallen".

The FA states under law 4 that "The basic compulsory equipment must not have political, religious or personal slogans, statements or images".

However the English Football Association fought back saying that players from both sides would wear black armbands carrying the poppy 'as a point of principle'. In addition, a campaign backed by 200,000 to overturn the ban by Fifa was submitted. Furthermore, former RAF pilot and prisoner of war John Nichol launched a online petition on the change.org site urging Fifa to change its mind saying, "The poppy is not a political statement at all. It is a statement of remembrance and an acknowledgement of sacrifice from the First World War right through to the sacrifices of our young men and women today".

Fifa said it did not ban the display of poppies and described that any such claim was "a distortion of the facts". They also stated that they could not pre-judge what symbols would constitute a breach of rules. However, it's secretary general, Fatma Samoura, told BBC Sport last week: "Britain is not the only country that has been suffering from the result of war."

Fifa's governing body has warned repeatedly that they see the poppy as a political symbol, with general secretary Fatima Samoura saying, "any kind of sanction" could be handed to teams that go against the regulations, including a point's deduction but it will most likely be a fine.

England won Friday's qualifying match 3-0, with goals from Daniel Sturridge, Adam Lallana and Gary Cahill.

The uproar of opinion continues ...

EDITORS THOUGHTS

We the editors believe that Fifa were wrong to ban footballers from wearing poppies as it holds a symbolic meaning; representing Remembrance Day and the people who lost their lives to protect us as well as our country during war time.
